

The Alarm, Save Your Crying

You say that there's no place to run to
Is that any kind of place for you to hide?
You say no one is telling you the truth anymore
Then for God's sake who's telling lies?
Now you might need something to believe in
That'll help you to see what is right
So save it 'til later and later and later again

Save all your crying 'til later
Take a hard, hard look around
Save all your crying 'til later
You know it won't fall down

If today feels like it never should be
And you can't get your words out right
And the pressure is down like a guillotine
To cut off every road from the light
Now you might need something to believe in
That'll help you to see what is right
So save it 'til later and later and later again

Save all your crying 'til later
Take a hard, hard look around
Save all your crying 'til later
Because it won't fall down

Nothing I ever do seems to please you honey
You always seem to need more than I've got
But I going to love you
So save it 'til later and later and later again

Save all your crying 'til later
Take a hard, hard look around
Save all your crying 'til later
Because it won't fall down
You know it won't fall down

'Cause it won't fall down