

The Backstrokes, Reflections

VERSE 1:

If I wake up tomorrow, and the sun has not risen,
then I'll know I'm still dreaming, and that's why you're still with me.
See these stars up above us, meant for us to see each other here, where you'll tell me you love me, then hold me 'til the day.

CHORUS:

Reflections on, a passing day,
Reflected in the light of the dying sun
Reflected in the light of your eyes.

VERSE 2:

When the hours yield to stillness, and the years fade to mem'ry,
Then the air will still cry out, with the echoes of this song.
So it's said all things pass away, I still know that love can never leave, though I'll die in your arms here, I'll always sing to you.

CHORUS

BRIDGE:

This place in time, we'll still return, transforming past to present by immortal grace....

These shadowlands, these empty fields, this stillness brought to life by a single word
