

The Bear Quartet, Hawser wish that I could have my dreams back to distort the routines of growing disgust and getting nowhere but it's impossible I know every resurrection takes me further down this road

and the dust won't settle no the dust won't settle blows around with the ashes of every stubborn quest for someone to trust
whatever's burning tender along this calm and shifting view every little moth who's had enough reminds me of you how you used to whisper in my hair beware of who you trust the way you disappear

down this road

and the dust won't settle
no the dust won't settle
blows around with the ashes
of every stubborn quest
for someone to trust
whatever's burning tender

and the dust won't settle
no the dust won't settle
blows around with the ashes
of every stubborn quest
for someone to trust
whatever's burning tender
and the dust won't settle
no the dust won't settle
blows around with the ashes
of every stubborn quest
for someone to trust
whatever's burning tender
whatever's burning tender
whatever's burning tender
blows around with the ashes
of every stubborn quest
for someone to trust