The Benjamin Gate, Parent

would I lie to you if it meant me going down too? would I be losing you if I pushed too far my throat is raw my eyes are sore all this shouting and screaming going on tugging and pulling on my youth just trying to get the truth is this the way it's always been can't change your point of view God is good and this is true

what have I left behind oh loving parent what do I hope to be one day oh loving parent would you take me as I am if I couldn't get it right would you still hear me out if I spoke my mind my heart is broken, my mind confused all these expectations way too high tugging and pulling at the truth just trying to understand my youth is this the way it's meant to be can you change your point of view God is good and this is true

what have I left behind oh loving parent what do I hope to be one day oh loving parent

what have I now become oh hated daughter what have I now become beloved son