

The Browns, All I Had To Do

Morning comes and spreads
Tomorrow on my bed so softly
I can feel the darkness grow
Leaving like the girl
Who walked across my world
And took the only love I'll ever know

She was all I wanted but
I guess I never told her
Now she's gone away
If I had a wish
My only wish would be
That she was coming back to stay

All I had to do to hold her, was hold her

I was always looking out
For me and only thought about
All the things I had to do
All I did was turn away
When all she wanted me to say
Was, I love you

Evening starts to spread
Across my lonely bed
So slowly I can feel the darkness grow

Shadows bring the gloom
That fills my silent room
With sounds of someone cryin' low
I close my eyes and memorize
The softness of her lips on my own

What's the point in being strong
Or being right or wrong
If that point means as being alone
All I had to do to hold her. was hold her
All I had to do to hold her, was hold her...
