

The Cooper Temple Clause, Not Quite Enough

When the next breath I take is the one that fixes me
The colours you see may put doubt in your eyes
Such beautiful shades
What has gone before will make you laugh
I hope it makes you laugh

Its not quite enough
To begin to cry
But more than enough to destroy
All the things I've ever fallen in and out of love with

Please wish I did
Please wish I did

It will never be better in the morning
And no matter how hard you try its killing me

Its not quite enough
To begin to cry
But more than enough to destroy
All the things I've ever fallen in and out of love with

Please wish I did
