

The Cure, Sirensong

It couldve been her golden hair
That turned my head
I didnt look to stare
Like I was hypnotized
But I was fixed
On how she pointed slowly down
And low I sank
And still without a sound
The world was far away
And I was tricked

It couldve been her silver skin
That drew me on
I didnt mean to spin
Like I was mesmerised
But I was rapt
Without a name or memory
I waited there
Too scared to even breathe

She sang she sang she sang

She sang
Tell me you love me
And beg me to stay
She sang
Tell me you love me
Before its too late
She sang
Give me your life
Or I must fly away
And you will never hear this song again

It couldve been her crystal eyes
That made me stop
I didnt want to sigh
Like I was stupefied
But I was thrown
And at that point of no return
My whole life hanging
On a single word
To be hers evermore
Or mine alone

She sang she sang she sang

She sang
Tell me you love me
And beg me to stay
She sang
Tell me you love me
Before its too late
She sang
Give me your life
Or I must fly away
And you will never hear this song again