The Decemberists, Clementine

You slept in your overalls After the wrecking ball Bereft you of house and home And left you with sweet "fuck all"

So we got in your car With our kick-about arts And we hollered out, "sweet Clementine"

Tell your mom to marry us A candle to carry us With cans on our bicycle fenders So sweet and hilarious

And we'll find us a home Built of packaging foam That will be there till after we die

And I'll play the clarinet Use clam shells for castanets We play with our bags on our shoulders My sweet lady lioness

And I watch as you sleep So indelibly deep and I hum to you, sweet Clementine
