

The Go Set, Scarlet Snow

Jimmy stood in the centre of the town,
said 'come one, come all I've news to tell,
All men of age and fit, are asked to do their bit, for duty binds us all to king and land'
Setting off, on the train to Melbourne Town, word said this would end by Christmas day,
And fixing bayonet, up to knees in mud and shit, those words had never seemed so far away,
Well the night was bitter cold, and the white had fallen thick,
As they climbed the wall and charged towards the line
Through the smoke and thunder, as the shells hit the ground
Was a moment in the madness where neither heard a sound
For frozen men and metal, that littered all the field,
Were covered for a moment by the winters soft white yield
And Clem had fallen down in all the noise and rapid rain,
Time stopped for a moment, and would never start again
Lay down your guns and be brothers once again, they said
Lay down your guns, lay down your guns,
They lay there in each others arms in that shell hole in the field,
The snow below them turned a scarlet red
Not a word was spoken, but his eyes had turned to grey
One last breath of mist drew out, and gently blew away Lay down your guns boys, head the ships for south across the sea:..
