The Goo Goo Dolls, Without You Here

Your love's a gathered storm I chased across the sky A moment in your arms became the reason why And you're still the only light that fills the emptiness The only one I need until my dying breath And I would give you everything just to Feel your open arms And I'm not sure I believe anything I feel

And now, now that you're near There's nothing more without you Without you here

And I'm trying to believe In things that I don't know The turning of the world The color of your soul That love could kill the pain Truth is never vain It turns strangers into lovers And enemies to brothers Just say you understand I never had this planned

And now, now that you're near There's nothing more without you Without you here Without you here There's nothing more without you Without you here

My head lies to my heart And my heart it still believes It seems the ones who love us are the ones That we deceive But you're changing everything You're changing everything in me

And now, now that you're near There's nothing more without you Without you here