

The Messenger, Sex & John Candy

When we finally awake from all the stupid little games we've played
It reminds myself, was it worth it?

To look back on what we've wanted in the end

Any open invitation that you extend to me, from now on disregard

Where's the pulse inside your heart? Your every secret lovers frown.

Sit up straight and listen to me girl, pride comes before the fall in this world.

Sit up straight and pay attention please, and find yourself some meaning.

And I see so clearly now, the things that you've done to me

Did you think that this was just a game to me? I guess it was to you

You're like a dangerous gamble, all I know is where the chips are laying.

So roll the dice and start the playing. It's anyone's game to you.

Sit up straight and listen to me girl, pride comes before the fall in this world.

Sit up straight and pay attention please, and find yourself some meaning.

Well you've got me here now, so let me see what you've got tonight.

Oh yeah, the way you dance, the way you move, the way you shake the way you groove, it doesn't do a thing to me.

Watch me, see me, leaving in disgust.

Sit up straight and listen to me girl, pride comes before the fall in this world.

Sit up straight and pay attention please, and find yourself some meaning.

I pulled my own weight, I pulled my weight around for you.
