

The Red Jumpsuit Apparatus, Twenty Hour Drive

Yeah!

Now it's falling around you pickup the pieces you know they wont fit tear drops are falling down like rain ocean water around you I see it coming round again, I know now I realize that I'll be fine and I'll forget you

Will you ever learn that there's more to life than helping yourself?
will I reach out my hand and stop you from falling which starts this over again

This time there's no where left to talk as I run down the boardwalk trying hard to forget your face I know wish I could finally find the strength to open up your letters I think, I'll throw them all away instead

Now I realize, that I'll be fine
and I'll forget you

Will you ever learn
that there's more to life than helping yourself?
will I reach out my hand
and stop you from falling

(part 1)

Don't know if I can bring myself
to open up your letters maybe I'll throw them all away forget you all together know now I'm waiting back at home
know now I'm waiting back at home and I am starving for affection affection.....

(part 2)

I see you
I know you
I can see right through you
I can see right through you

When will I finally find the strength to open up your letters?
I think I'll throw them all away forget you all together when will I find my way back home find my way on back home my way back home.... and now its falling around you pick up the pieces you know they wont fit.
