

The Swellers, Let Me In

Some days I need to get my mind straight,
and gravity's my greatest friend.
When the buildings fall down,
I'll be standing my ground.
I'm not afraid of what you've become.
Look into my eyes, there's nowhere left to run.
Get up and don't waste my time.
I need a place to rest my head.
Sometimes I wish someone would rest theirs on me again.
So I went to your house, and no one let me in.
Losing faith will pay off when I sell my soul to them.
I'm kinda scared to think that being on my own is the future set in stone for me, but all that I can see is I'm better off being alone.
I'm better off alone.
I'm home
