

The Unseen, Tradition

you cling to an old world, of morals of a long past age why is it hard to accept that things have changed?

you swallowed every word without and question followed all you heard for the sake of tradition say that your religious but your faith just ain't true you salute a flag without asking what it did for you you've been spoon feed your every thought always did just as your taught you have a right to think that way but i question your integrity always forcing your views on me but they're just slogans it's plain to see fuck tradition