Tilly And The Wall, Let It Rain

"Get into the groove boy you've got to prove your love to me" Played on the radio as we drove down south to see our families You were lying there in the passenger chair sound asleep I could recall a time when evenings were bright and thick with love And all the city streets and their lights they were so mysterious Oh life it was so wonderful it would shine just like fire How we sat on the backs of our cars and laughed into the morning I thought you'd come and go I never thought you would stay And I'm sorry if I tried to push you away But the edges they fold and you suddenly find you are buried beneath A blanket of snow you had no idea was even falling Now you're sitting on a ouch inside your home feeling cold Mothing is clear, all your thoughts they have become so hard to find With a question mark always slumped at the end of these awkward lines All the simple words we loved to speak are no longer audible And I never thought with you and I this would be possible I can feel the world coming apart And I need you by my side with your delicate heart So please don't leave me no don't you run Don't be frightened by the storm so bold and brave Just let it rain
