

Tina Dico, Give In

Give in to your confusion
There's no good in hiding
Why you're unusual
Leave it behind, then change your mind
Take what you find, it will be good enough

Too young to be heros
Too old to play April fools
Too smart to be honest
We've got too much to lose
It's too late to be perfect
And it's not like we haven't tried
It's hard but it's worth it
Every time we get it right

Every time you give in
And go where it takes you
Stand by the feeling
Even if it breaks you
It's always a guess which way is the best
Take what you find and make it good enough

Too young to be heros
Too old to play April fools
Too smart to be honest
We've got too much to lose
It's too late to be perfect
And it's not like we haven't tried
It's hard but it's worth it
Every time we get it right

And even when you're lost inside yourself
Even when too weak to cry for help
Even when you can't put up a fight
Even when you're broken you aren't quite
Maybe it's the struggle that you need
Something to disturb you in your sleep
A kiss of madness on your cheek
When will you see you've got to

Give in to you confusion
Leave it behind, then change your mind
Take what you find, let it be good enough

Too young to be heros
Too old to play April fools
Too smart to be honest
We've got too much to lose
Too young to be heros
It's too late to be perfect
And it's not like we haven't tried
It's hard but it's worth it
Every time we give
