

Tom Waits, Annie's Back In Town

In the evening he stumbles home with his tie undone
And as the moon sweeps 7th Avenue as usual
You lie awake at night You remember when now that Annie's back in town

Well I know why you're drinking I know your alibi Don't make up excuses for those are tears in your eyes And you're falling back in love again
now that Annie's back in town

And it came down through the grapevine
It put your business on the street I hear you've been hanging out 'til dawn in some lunch room Well you thought you've gotten over her but that was 'til you found that Annie's back in town

And all the corner boys are trouble-makers and the sailors are all fools
You know it seems like some things round here
I guess they'll never change Oh but it's always good for business Guess we'll be seeing you around
now that Annie's back in town
