Toni Childs, Three Days

I walk away it seems it's like a bad day on the hill I stand and stare away hoping for a brighter day and I stand staring there and I stand staring there today

I feel the rain fall upon my face and wash away the things I feel inside turmoil is what moves the tides and I stand staring there and I stand staring there and I begin another day you say you hurt and the cut has been too deep the blood that flows inside your soul has died cancer is the hurt inside and I can't walk away and I can't show the pain and I can't let it go and I can't let it go away it's another day the morning comes so bright I feel lifted now the clouds have passed I feel freedom here at last