

Trans-Siberian Orchestra, The Moment

(BEETHOVEN)

In this world of circumstance
Children never fear forever
And this moment that enchants
Someday we may both remember

Then
Maybe then
If we are still alive
Then
Maybe then
This moment will survive

There is time in every word
There are words in every reason
And these notes that are unheard
One day they may find their season

Then
Maybe then
If we are still alive
Then
Maybe then
This moment will survive

Then
Maybe then
If we are still alive
Maybe then
This moment will survive

(Beethoven turns to Fate and tells her, "I did not need this childhood. I did not need my mother.")

(Fate tells him that it will all be as he wishes but before she grants his request he should be aware of the consequences.)

(Fate then says, "Surely there were happy times, magical moments?")

(Beethoven replies, "There were some.")

("Like the first time you arrived in Vienna?")

("Like the first time I arrived in Vienna.")

(Within seconds they are there witnessing a rhapsodizing Beethoven as a young man seeing Vienna for the first time.)
