

Transit, Stays The Same

I watched your ship sink into an ocean, into a sea of self-destruction.

Your hands were reaching up.

(Now you're only pulling me down with it.)

We watched your ship sink into an ocean, into a sea of our destruction.

Your hands were reaching up.

(Now you're only pulling me down with it.)

I watched your ship sink into an ocean, into a sea of self-destruction.

Our hands were reaching out with anchors dragging us down again.

I close my eyes and look at my life.

You're an anchor so far away from you where want to be.

You run at break neck speeds to find the ribbon has been broken all along.

So far away from you were want to be and you pray for change

But that never solved anything.

(You're an anchor, so far away where nothing changes, it stays the same.)

As we let go (You're an anchor and a mistake)

We close our eyes (Will I have what it takes)

I hope you find your way back home.

(You're an anchor and a mistake)

I hope you find that place again.

(Will I have what it takes)

I just can't hold my breath anymore.

We're only going down again.