

Trisha Yearwood, When We Were Still In Love

When we were still in love
I knew just what to do
For my heart was like a child at play
When all the world is new
When we were still in love
I didn't have a fear
'Cause I still believed a love like ours
Would never disappear

I remember everything
As if it were happening
When the promise that we made
Was everlasting

When we were still in love
Above the clouds we flew, yes
But now they have gone out to sea
To weep for me and you

I remember everything
As if it were happening
When the promise that we made
Was everlasting

When we were still in love
I sang a happy song
But now all I hear is the bitter wind
That whispers love is gone

Now all I hear is the bitter wind
That whispers love is gone
