

Twice Born, Religion Addiction

Religious man shaking hands

Talking all his empty talk with a void still deep inside his hollow heart

Why can't he see that religion's just another sin that's binding him

And blinding him from seeing that he's just another sinful man

With an addiction that he doesn't understand

Because he's convinced that religion's God's plan

But he'll never see the true face of God in his practice

Because his heart never knew God

Never knew (God).

God, save his soul, show him a new day

Open his eyes, show him your face, show him the truth

The truth is only found in you.

If it's not of God, religion is a sin

Without the Spirit of God, religion's empty

Without the Spirit of God, religion is a sin

Without the Spirit of God, religion's empty.

Salvation doesn't come from your church attendance

Salvation comes from your heart's repentance

Seeking God's face in your life then

He'll give you a reason to believe in something real

God's salvation is real.

You say that you tried the whole "God Thing";

But all you've ever tried was an organized gathering

You never tried to see through the face of tradition

So all you ever saw was a bunch on contradiction.

You were always told by these things you must abide

But you were never really filled with God inside

Here today, gone tomorrow

Still left with the same old sorrows.
