

Ty Herndon, Right About Now

Right about now
She's happy to let the morning
Sun through the window kiss her face

Right about now
I'll bet she's finishing up her crossword
And loving the way her coffee taste

Right about now
I wish i was more that just a memory to her
I didn't listen somehow
When
She said
You'll miss me if you go
And I swore
Before I slammed the door
I'll never think of you again
Oh I was so wrong back then
And she so
Right about now

Right about now
Shouldn't I be the one
Who's better for all the time that's past
Oh and shouldn't I be
The one who's telling friends
I'm happy to be alone at last

Theres nothing right about now
It's just like she promised on the day I left her
What goes around comes around

When
She said
You'll miss me if you go
And I swore
Before I slammed the door
I'll never think of you again
Oh I was so wrong back then
And she was so ... right about now.. right about now

Shouldn't I be the one