

Under Black Clouds, As Blackness Comes

In a dream
we quarrel again
don't love each other our eyes are black like the hell
in a dream
our looks are dead romance there's no rest
and the night is forever I lose hold
how long does it take?
I sink into blackness cold like a dead hell your silhouette
is a far shore
a million miles
far away from me.

Clumsy and slow
my body falls upon you
the smell of your sweet is what I love my face gets wet
and blindness burns in my eyes only dumb screams
no word comes over your lips my blunt hands
are like two claws in your shoulders I hold you
and it is silence
I see black
I eat into the darkness I'm buried in you
while you disappear.

I stare blind
and see a darkness so cold and deep
like a frozen sea
I get up and open the door into the light I emerge
to breathe the air which I do not need In your eyes
I see deep and cold hate which breaks out in you and in the abyss of the night whenever blackness comes it is deeper than your eyes pain is coming and it is for eternity!

I hold on like a survivor to a shipwreck I cling to the hope that swims like driftwood throughout days and nights whipped by the beat of my black and bleeding heart.
