

Vanity Project, By The Roadside

She was the most beautiful women I'd ever known

She was the most beautiful women I'd ever known

She died by the roadside

I cried

She was a princess, defenseless and now there's a senseless crime

She was the most beautiful women he'd never known

She was the most beautiful women he'd never known

She died by the roadside

He tried to deny that he was guilty till he caught her not in her sleep

When they found him asleep in his car at the side of the road with her dreams in a jar

He knew by the cuffs on the wrists that he'd never existed till now

After searching her place they dismissed his case they'd found her note that all she wrote