Venin Noir, Redemption Through Pain

(Music: Santos Lyrics: Dias)

(" Every learning process demands some sacrifice, so we should see suffering as a part of ou

(I - Morning has died)

I relied upon you As the sun trusts night to the moon Morning has died, it will have me dead too soon Death comes always too soon But it might bring some peace along Never to the living ones

(II - Cringing in this heaven)

And somehow this redemption
Sounds like a doubtful player
And yet this pain that sprouts
Frees me from this war to declare
Redemption through pain
Stop trying to make me crawl
Blood being spilled
Where pictures of you sprawl
Some scars can never be removed

Senseless dreamer I've been As any other fool would have Vain destruction, I name your masterpiece after you In my ruins, unable to feel a single hope Fed up with blurring truths

I know, know that I was nothing Consumed by your will But I will, I'll turn you into nothing Cause cringing in this heaven Makes us feel so heathen and yet released
