The Wheel

The dripping roof top,
Splashes of water along the sidewalk,
People without a family,
Hesitates to move forward.

The blurry grey of summer,
Who gave love the energy,
Stopping and starting,
It's very tiring,

The clouds and moon embraces the blue sky,
You and I are trapped in the rainy days,
The act of recovery begins,
Every cycle sinks deeper,
The uneven world,
The pain is like the spikes of a gear wheel biting the heart,
Every day, every night, every year,
It spins and spins and without rest.
