Voltaire, I'm Sorry

Life has a way of making you humble Day after day it's bringing you to your knees all's okay, then everything crumbles And all that you perceive is blowing away

But while I'm tearing at the seams I'll apologize to anything I'm sorry....

All's black and white when you're just a baby You get some hair on your chin you think you know everything Years go by then everything's "maybe" and all that you believe Drowns in a sea of gray

But while I'm tearing at the seams I'll apologize to anything I'm sorry, I'm selfish Im sorry, i behave this way I'm sorry, couldn't help it I'm sorry that you lost your faith in me

(I'm sorry that you lost your faith I'm sorry that it rains I'm sorry I ever came I'm sorry, I'm sorry)