

War of Words, From The Killing Fields

dear mom and dear old man they say the time has come for war isn't this what we all wanted a chance to get them back well i've been searching but i don't recall what for cause out here and so far away there just aren't any answers anymore

can you get me out of this place
away from this world away from these killing fields little brother i'm leaving for a while that makes you the man of this house until i return cause dad's body still lays with the war from years before and your mother needs you now more than ever

away from this world away from these killing fields little one my first and only child these are my last words i don't get to see you grow up so i leave behind the only thing i know can protect you from the world and the evil that's out there gave love and life for my country and she loves me but not today to the world i leave nothing behind cause this cold steel in my arms is the only thing i have and i've been waiting but i don't remember why cause out here and so far away there just aren't any answers

away from this world away from these killing fields
