

Warner Mack, It'll Be Alright In The Morning

I'll be all right in the morning after the break of dawn
I'll be all right in the morning after the darkness moves on

Well tonight there's teardrops on my pillow tears from cryin' over you
And that old moon outside my window has scattered mem'ries round my room
But I'll be all right...

Oh it seems there's something bout the daylight that always helps me ease the pain
But when the sunset breaks on the night the bad half of your love rules again
But I'll be all right...

Mhm it seems like forever since you left me but how could forever be this long
Each night just seems like an eternity while I toss and turn and wait for the dawn
But I'll be all right...
After the darkness moves on yeah after the darkness moves on
