

Warren Zanes, Have You Once Recalled The Days?

I haven't seen you since I did that day I haven't said her when I really mean you it hasn't been that way I haven't come home said hello then wandered a million miles away I haven't lay awake when she's beside me It hasn't been that way but something's feeling kind of strange have you once recalled the days? imagined eyes? have you once recalled the days? the things we'd say? if we went back to where we were that day and we had tried a little moment but a whole world got rearranged don't want you to wonder, you know I'm doing great don't want to break out things I shouldn't take out that are better left that way don't want to show you something that would throw you might be my big mistake but something's feeling kind of strange have you once recalled the days? and imagined eyes? the things we'd say if we went back to where we were that day and we had tried I don't want to fight it but I don't want to fade away not this time a little moment but a whole world got rearranged I might be fooling myself I might be fooling myself again today