

Watashi-Wa, All That I Can't Keep

All my thoughts aren't against me
At several thousand feet of all the things I've seen
Of what my life even means
I've gathered all these things
Things that I can't keep

Well I want to give this an ocean
That could carry on when I'm gone

I want to see
I want to love (i want to believe)
I want to send a soul when fire comes
And I want to be the man I'm meant to be
And give away all that I can be

When it rains late in the spring
It pains me then to rain
And something moves in me
And it won't leave me alone
To what I'm living for
To what I want to be

Pays me in the rain
Something moves in me
And it wont leave me alone
To what I'm living for
To what I want to be

I want to give this world an ocean
That could carry on when I'm gone

I want to see
I want to love (I want to believe)
I want to send a soul when fire comes
And I want to be the man I'm meant to be
And run where I can't see
And give away all that I can be

All the waves inside of me
Are moving me to face the day
To give away what I can't keep
All these things that I can't keep
I want to see
I want to be
I want to love
To find away to leave the things that move in me
I still believe
What moves in me
I still believe
The roads in me
