We Came As Romans, What I Wished I Never Ha

Don't catch me at the wrong time Or you will feel my wrath The one I wished I never had Wished I never had

I need to rid myself of resentment And every last bit of it If I'm going to live up to the things I've written I need to clear my mind of this anger And all the rage that I've held near If I'm going to live up to the words I've spoken

But I haven't yet Letting go Is how I can start to fight my way Out of this trench I've dug In this war against myself This war against myself But I haven't yet But I haven't yet

Don't catch me at the wrong time Or you will feel my wrath The one I wished I never had Wished I never had

I wish I never had this demon inside I wish I knew how to cast it out I wish I never had this demon inside I wish I knew how to cast it out

But I fear it will never leave me But I fear it will never leave me

I need to rid myself of resentment And every last bit of it If I'm going to live up to the things I've written I need to clear my mind of this anger And all the rage that I've held near If I'm going to live up to the words I've spoken

Letting go, just let it go I know, I know Letting go, just let it go I know, I know Letting go, just let it go I know, I know Letting go, just let it go I know, I know

I know I need to let go Of everything that has Ever made me think myself better I'm not better than anyone else Of anything that's filled me with anger That I have taken out on everyone else On everyone else

These demons will never leave me I can only find ways to not let them out These demons will never leave me But I control them, Not the other way around
