

Wester, Don't Be A Hero

DON't BE A Hero

you've taken my breath away for the very last time never again will my lungs be left unsatisfied on account of you let's get this straight, you had it all.
how many lives can i possibly offer before it's enough? you know that i risked it all for you i screamed through the fog at 100 miles an hour i thought i had found my way home how am i to make a wish when all the stars have all burned out? you always told me that they would be mine one day.
don't tell me that this doesn't hurt you i need you to feel the same as i do you know i'm the only one equipped to break you so why am i feeling so cold?

we're out here all alone, if only you'd find it in yourself to give it all up we're on a collision course with certain failure but i promised i wouldn't let you down it's so dark out tonight, you painted it all black. i'll take this to my grave.

so why am i feeling so cold?

so throw me overboard, as if you ever needed me anyway tie the anchor around my ankles, i'm better off at the bottom of all of this there's nothing left to say, so seal your heart off and watch me fade away
there's nothing left to say, so seal your heart off and watch me fade away
