

Whippersnapper, Fine Line Life

Take what you want if there's no one looking Say what you will if there's no one listening closely You make your moves so slowly a fly upon the wall
You wonder what they're going to say when you are gone and you're afraid they're going to find that you're wrong you're so busy trying Appearances wear thin.
Don't be a slave to the voices in your head, You'll play it safe if it gets you into bed.
And is it really lying if it gets you what you need?
I can't believe all the tightropes that you walk
You make believe that your angle's all you've got and leave me feeling sorry cause you can't see It's all inside your head
You cross the line and swallow all the lies that you've been fed
From time to time, you'll wake up feeling anxious in your bed
Your conscience screaming
what will anyone care when I am dead?
Your fine line life.
And it's alright.
I can't really judge you.
Because I don't have to be you.
I just want you to see I'm not afraid to say exactly what I think You take control and you decide to swim or sink and live your life with passion remember that it's all inside your head.
You dance the line and swallow all the lies that you've been fed from time to time, you'll wake up feeling anxious in your bed
Your conscience screaming,
what will anyone care when I am dead?
Your fine line life.
Don't try to be the kind of person that you're not Quit holding back you've got to give it what you've got you might find it surprising be honest with yourself
It doesn't really matter what the others think You take control and decide to swim or sink.
and live your life with passion remember that it's all inside your head...
