

Whippersnapper, Steady The Walls

You're too afraid to make your mind up for yourself
You do what's safe so you can ease the consequence,
But there are always consequences nonetheless
Confusion takes control.
You've no regrets at least that's what you tell yourself,
But everyday you seem to smile less and less
You always wonder if you've given up your only chance
And should you blame yourself?

Steady the walls close in
You hold your head
Is this the end?
Steady the walls close in
You hold your breath
The room spinning

And we all lose our strength now and then
We lose our faith we lose our confidence
But in some small way there's always hopefulness
It's easily regained.
Taken for granted because it seems so obvious
Can't lose the feeling we can only let it slip
Away from us when we are tired from weariness
We won't let it go. We can let it go... we can let it -

Steady the walls close in
You hold your head
Is this the end?
Steady the walls close in
You hold your breath
The room spinning

Not afraid to fall Not afraid of falling
Not afraid to fall Not afraid of falling
Not afraid to fall...

Follow the path or find your way on your own
There's always a risk there's always another road
Each of us face uncertainty all alone Not afraid to fall

Steady the walls close in
A held out hand Is this the end?
Steady the walls close in
We hold our breath
The room spinning
