

Wide Mouth Mason, The River Song

he ran to the river where the water run dry
He ran to the candle but the light had done died
And I used to love you and not even try

He ran to the temple with tears in his eyes
He fell on his knees and reached up at the same time
Said I only love you knowing I'll die

All my life I've tried to be good
Or at least to myself
You did what you thought you should
But it hurt me like hell
Like hell

He ran to his mother and to her he cried
You never told the whole story and I
Think all along I pretended to try
Well, look...

All my life I've tried to be good
Or at least to myself
You did what you thought you should
But it hurt me like hell

All my life I've tried to be good
Or at least to myself
You did what you thought you should
But it hurt me like hell
Yes it hurt me like hell
But it hurt me like hell
Yes hurt me like hell
Like Hell
Ooooh....
