

Will Dailey, Yesterday's Gone

You paint your body red

But you'll always be the shadow that you're hiding in

And all the things you've said

You never add them up

Before you pay for it

Beside you now, but not for long

Do you know that your

Yesterdays Gone

So why do you hang on

When it's over

And when we could be stars

Why do you hang on

When it is over.

I know there are waves that you can take

The ones you can't just wash over anyway

All the ones that break before they reach your face

You'll find another way

Were crashing down and pulling out

Your demise it gets no rest

You use your will

to chase the moon all night

You lost our audience

Without applause

They walk away all right.

Do you know that your

Yesterdays gone

So why do you hang on

When its over

And when we could be stars

Why do you hang on

When its over

I want our names in the sky

I want our names in the sky
