

Yellow Hammers, (I Could Never) Repay Baby

remembering how I used to feel but I'm holding my head up knowing that my bed is holding you I'm holding my breath
I'm holding my arms out to you I could never get out from underneath this debt the debt of kicking my broken soul and breathing the life into me I couldn't walk enough miles
I couldn't rope enough sky to give you I could never repay baby all that I owe Don't ever leave me alone
I couldn't face the streets that I've roamed I couldn't face another minute without you baby since you put your spell on me I've shut my eyes stopped my cries
I'm mesmerized
baby by you
I could never repay you
You never asked me for anything
When I'd give it all to you All I ask is a little look a nod
a grin
Won't you let me in your room?
