

Yoko Ono, Turned The Corner

I turned a corner,
It didn't seem that was wrong,
I was just having a laugh.
But suddenly my friends are gone
And I didn't know that life would be so long.

I turned the clock
And went around the block,
Thought I was just having a laugh.

But suddenly my world was gone
And I found myself standing alone.

I thought I was fighting the ebb of life,
I thought I was cutting the web and the strife.
But I look at the mirror where there used to be a smile,
Now I see a stranger.

Ad lib.
