

Yoko Ono, Waiting For The Sunrise

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So I can take your hand and stroll about

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So we can go on the streets and see the people smile

Give me your hand
So I could tell you that things will be alright
The rooms still dark but it wont be so long and I can take you outside

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So we can go to the park and roll about

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So we can go to the docks and watch the boats go by

Come on, love
Give me your hand
and things will be alright
The room's still cold
But it wont be so long that we can go outside

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So I could see your hair shining in the air

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
So I can see the sky reflected in your eyes

Come on, love
Don't be depressed
Things will be alright
The room's too low
But it wont be so long
That we can be outside

Waiting for the sunrise

Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise
Waiting for the sunrise