

Your Demise, Miles Away

The beat went on and I just stopped,
My hands are tied but my heart was not.

You let go of me, to hold on to better things.
In a world of Someones, I just wanted to be no one.
Live my life on my own, selfish I know,
But who would even know, who would even know?

I'm not one to be screaming Fuck The World.
But muttered under long breaths,
There's no life I'd have rather lived.
No life I'd have rather lived.

I'm not one to be screaming Fuck The World.
But muttered under long breaths,
And there's no life I'd have rather lived.

Alone, alone, alone, so alone,
On and on and on and on and on.
Times have changed and I've changed my perception,
But I still remember.
Alone, alone, alone, so alone,
On and on and on and on and on.
Being so heavy-hearted
Fleeting days remind me of how I used to be.

Immersed myself in my own regret, smoking myself to sleep,
Plus I will never sleep because sleep is the cousin of death.
If I could change myself I would be a better man,
But I'm just hanging on to the boy inside,
I'm never happy with myself,
But living for the downside is far too fucking easy.

Alone, alone, alone, so alone,
On and on and on and on and on.
Times have changed and I've changed my perception,
But I still remember.
Alone, alone, alone, so alone,
On and on and on and on and on.
Being so heavy-hearted
Fleeting days remind me of how I used to be.
Of how I used to be.
Of how I used to fuckin' be.